FARMS to build $5 million facility

WEATHER JACOBSON
Daily Universe Staff Writer

Construction will begin next spring on a 30,000-square-foot, $5 million facility for the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies.

The four-story building will be adjacent to the BYU campus, between the Harold Health Center and the Ezra Taft Benson Building, and will feature lecture halls, office space, a display and lecture halls, office space, a foundation distribution center and a Book of Mormon Research Library.

The project should take slightly less than a year to complete.

Although the facility will not be recognized as an official part of BYU, it will, Hall, director of operations, see it as an asset to the community.

Students and faculty will have free access to the facility, where they will be able to see displays of current and past Mormon research projects and participate in religious research of the past. The library research center will house a computer lab where students will have access to the Internet and to the Harold B. Lee Library's on-line computer systems.

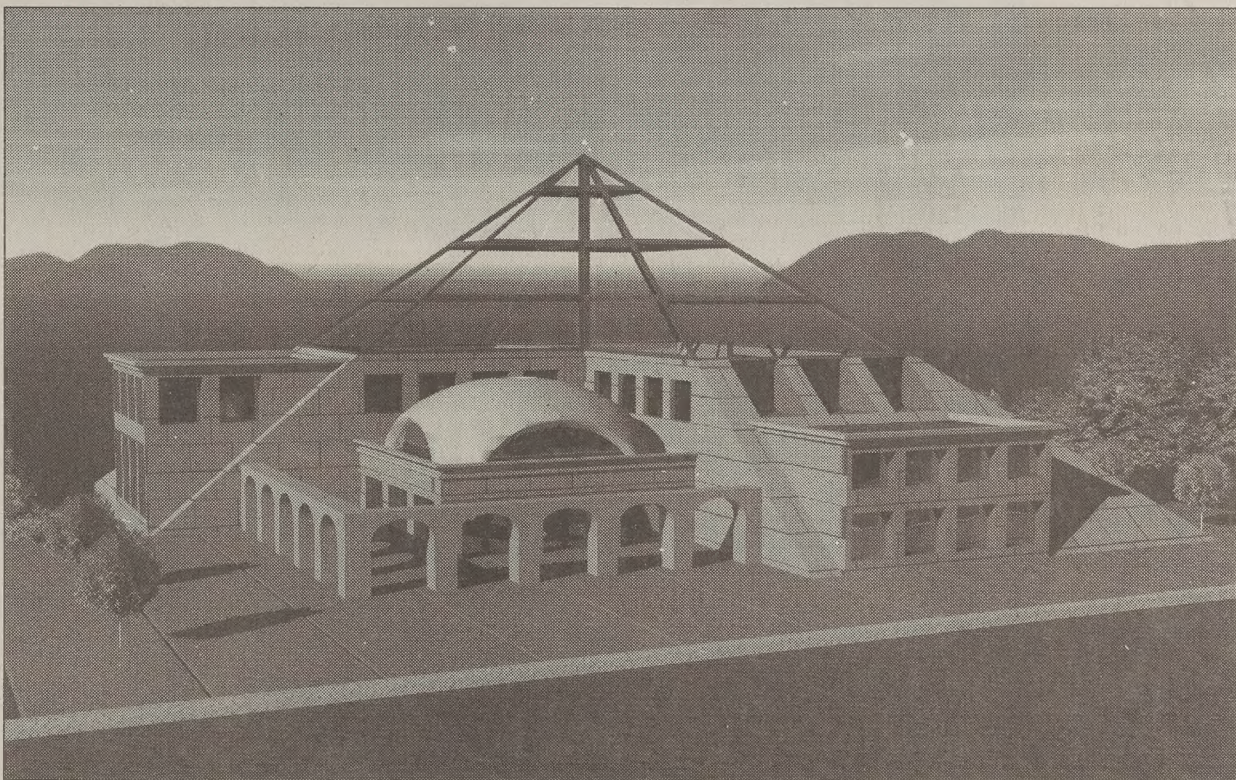

Additional reference materials, including literature and research publications, will also be available on CD-ROM.

Hall said the building will also be a great missionary tool for visitors to the university who want to know more about the LDS Church and its teachings. Visitors will see displays about the Book of Mormon and the land where researchers believe the history took place.

Hall said the campus could benefit from another place to share gospel beliefs with dignitaries and the university's approximately 250,000 annual visitors. Currently, the campus tour includes sites such as computers, classrooms, statues and the football stadium, Hall said. The new FARMS facility will help visitors better understand the gospel, he said.

"We hope this is a place you can come and say 'Let's talk to you about what our religious heritage is,'" he said.

The building's architecture reflects the blending of two cultures: the biblical pyramids of the Old World and the Book of Mormon New World, Hall said.

A stone wall with a Book of Mormon time line is planned to begin outside the front of the building and continue out the back doors. Gardens and arboretums will surround the building.

The FARMS lecture hall will accommodate 125-150 people and allow speakers and BYU professors to be televised during speeches and presentations. BYU faculty will be invited.

FUTURE FORTRESS: The 30,000-square-foot building, which is planned to house office space, lecture halls and a Book of Mormon research center and library, is due to be completed in 1997. It will offer free access to students and faculty.

Missing Utah girl found; man arrested

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A 13-year-old Utah girl, who disappeared while in New York to tape a talk show on teen misbehavior, was found Thursday. A young man was charged with raping her and holding her captive.

Junior Bumbury of Brooklyn, was arrested shortly before 1 a.m. when two officers saw him bang the teen's head against a street light post, Capt. Charles Wells said. Bumbury was charged with rape, sodomy, sexual abuse, unlawful imprisonment and endangering the welfare of a child.

Police said the girl told Bumbury she was 17 and had a consensual affair with him, but he held her captive when he realized she had lied about her age and was only 13. The rape charge was because of her age, police said.

The girl also said one of Bumbury's friends forcibly raped her while she was missing, Wells said. That man was not found.

The girl disappeared three weeks ago while staying with her mother at a Manhattan hotel awaiting a taping for the "Sally Jesse Raphael" show, police said. The girl told her mother she was going out for a smoke, according to police.

She and her mother, both from Magna, Utah, were in the city to appear on a segment of the talk show titled "Why Must You Dress Like That?"

The mother, who had written to Raphael, said her daughter was dressing inappropriately for her age and was boasting about sexual liaisons, the Daily News reported at the time of her disappearance. Police said the mother had described the girl as a "chronic runaway."

Raphael, who never met the girl, said today's arrest should stop rumors that it was a publicity stunt.

"I wouldn't use a 13-year-old child to get publicity. ... What kind of stunt would that be?" Raphael said.

PLO, Israel leaders sign landmark accord

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In another step toward peace, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO Chief Yasser Arafat signed a historic agreement Thursday, ending Israel's military occupation of the West Bank cities and laying the foundation for a Palestinian state.

"We want you as good neighbors," the gravelly-voiced Rabin said to Arafat, his former enemy.

Arafat praised the end of the occupation. "Enough killing and enough blood of innocent people," he said, moved to loud applause. Under the glittering chandeliers of the East Room, President Clinton presided over two hours of speeches and pageantry before an audience of 200 diplomats, foreign leaders, Cabinet secretaries and members of Congress. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Jordan's King Hussein joined Clinton as witnesses to the accord.

Clinton signed the accord in the White House, Pennsylvania Avenue was turned into a parking lot for nearly two dozen VIP limousines.

"Chapter by chapter, Jews and Arabs are writing a new chapter for their ancient lands," Clinton said. Arafat and Rabin both called on Syria and Lebanon to drop their reluctance and join the peace process.

To worldwide acclaim, Arafat and Rabin signed a tortuously negotiated agreement for Israel to relinquish control of territory it captured from Jordan in the 1967 Six-Day War.

The agreement outlines in painstaking detail the step-by-step withdrawal of Israeli forces. Governing authority will be transferred, allowing Palestinian self-rule and elections in 30 percent of the West Bank, where most of the West Bank's Arab population is concentrated.

Thousands protest signing of momentous West Bank autonomy agreement

Associated Press

PROVENCE, West Bank — As Israeli and the Palestine Liberation Organization sealed a West Bank autonomy accord Thursday, hard-core Israelis marched in Hebron to denounce their government of treason.

Anti-Israeli protests erupted in a shantytown camp. In the most Israelis and Palestinians appeared indifferent or hostile to the long-awaited agreement, which transfers one-third of the West Bank to PLO leader Yasser Arafat's control after a gradual withdrawal of Israeli troops from West Bank towns.

A White House signing ceremony broadcast live in the West Bank set off spontaneous protests in a Dheisheh refugee camp south of Bethlehem, home to 15,000 Palestinians. Hundreds of residents of shantytown sections of a tall chain-link fence the Israeli army erected to prevent the shantytown from being thrown at Israeli troops fired stun grenades to disperse the protesters.

"This fence reminds us of the occupation. If there is peace, there is no need for it," said resident Morad Zghrari, 24.

Palestinian merchants in Hebron shuttered their shops Thursday to comply with a strike call by the Muslim militant group Hamas. But Palestinians in seven other West Bank towns did not, indicating growing support for Arafat.

A survey conducted among Palestinians indicated that while 70 percent are in favor of peace talks, 60 percent doubt they will lead to a lasting peace with Israel. The survey had a margin of error of 3 percent.

Another survey published Thursday indicated that only 51 percent of Israelis support the new peace agreement, while 47 percent oppose it. The poll had a margin of error of 4 percent.

Direct lending, Pell Grants affected by proposed cuts

By J. AUDREY THATCHER
Daily Universe Staff Writer

The Republican Congress is proposing to cut more than $10 billion from the Department of Education, said U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Wiley in a phone conference Thursday.

The Senate is proposing to cap direct lending at 20 percent and the House is proposing to eliminate it altogether, said Marshall S. Smith, undersecretary of education.

Cuts to the direct-lending program include raising interest rates on loans to parents and eliminating the six-month interest-free grace period. Pell Grants and electronic funds transfers will also be affected, said Leo Kornfeld, senior adviser on direct lending.

Nearly 2 million students are on the direct-loan program at a cost of nearly $7 billion, Kornfeld said. If the cuts pass, approximately 1 million students waiting to get on the program will not be able to, and 1 million students on the program will have to be dropped, Kornfeld said.

Elimination of the six-month grace period would mean an estimated cost of $700 for each undergraduate student,

Smith said. Another aspect of the proposal is "taxing colleges for every loan their students receive, which clearly penalizes schools for admitting students who need financial aid," Wiley said.

Schools will have no incentive to accept students who need financial aid, no matter how deserving they are, Smith said. Since many colleges are run by the state, it can be considered a federal tax on the states, Smith said.

It adds up to $10.8 billion in unnecessary pain to students, to colleges and to families, he said.

Direct lending was started because the present system was not working effectively, said Madeleine Q. Kaunin, deputy secretary of education.

"Even the critics of direct lending will say that it has been healthy for the system to have competition," Kaunin said.

O.J.'s attorneys tell jury to question evidence

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a thundering summation that rocked the court, Johnnie Cochran Jr. exhorted O.J. Simpson's mostly black jury Thursday to "do the right thing" and acquit Simpson as a message against racism and police misconduct.

In the fevered style of a revival preacher, Cochran invoked biblical texts, referred to two key detectives as "the twin devils of deception" and told the spellbound jurors that fate had given them a chance to change history.

"Maybe there is a reason why we're here," he said. "Maybe you're the right people at the right time at the right place to say: 'No more!'"

"Stop this cover-up! Stop this cover-up!" Cochran belted in the second day of his summation. "You are the consciences of this community."

Cochran's impassioned appeal, which enraged the father of one murder victim, was followed by the cooler, scientific analysis of defense attorney Barry Scheck, who told jurors, "There is a cancer at the heart of this case."

Scheck insisted they could not trust any of the DNA analyses of blood because the samples were contaminated and tampered with in the "black hole" of the Los Angeles Police Department crime lab.

"Somebody played with this evidence," he said. "There's no doubt about it."

Using an analogy posed by forensic expert Henry Lee, Scheck compared the defense discovery of flawed evidence to finding a cockroach in a bowl of spaghetti — enough of a sign that the whole bowl is infested.

"How many cockroaches do you have to find in the bowl of spaghetti?" he asked. "This is reasonable doubt."

Cochran's emotion-packed discourse — often focused on Detective Mark Fuhrman — was clearly designed to rouse feelings of racial solidarity among the nine black members of the 12-person jury.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT: Media and cameras surround O.J. Simpson's defense attorney, Johnnie Cochran Jr., as he arrives Tuesday at the Criminal Courts Building in Los Angeles. In his summation Thursday, Cochran told jurors to "do the right thing" by acquitting Simpson.

Scientists weigh risks, gains of new diet drug

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Scientists debated Thursday whether the government should approve the nation's first obesity drug since 1973, a compound which makes people believe they are full.

The Food and Drug Administration has not approved the use of any obesity drug for more than several months because most are amphetamines, which can be addictive.

Dexfenfluramine, to be sold as Redux, is safer, said the manufacturer, Interneuron Pharmaceutical Inc.

But at very high doses, it has been shown to cripple serotonin production in animals, prompting concern about how it would affect the thousands of Americans likely to use it.

Interneuron Pharmaceutical Inc. told an FDA panel that the need for a better drug to treat the 78 million obese Americans is vital.

The drug would be a valuable tool, said Judith Stern, vice president of the American Obesity Association. Obesity kills 300,000 people and causes 20 million new illnesses in the United States every year.

Atheist's absence raises suspicion of death

DALLAS — America's most prominent atheist, Madalyn Murray O'Hair, hasn't been seen in public for weeks, giving rise to rumors that she died and that her followers are keeping it quiet so Christians don't pray over her.

A note was left at her Austin headquarters, American Atheists Inc., telling employees the offices would be shut down until further notice. The building is up for sale, and the normally accessible O'Hair hasn't returned telephone calls.

Board member Arnold Via said the 76-year-old Ms. O'Hair visited him in Virginia on Aug. 11 and was in poor health because of diabetes. That was the last time he saw her.

O'Hair filed the lawsuit in 1962 that led to the Supreme Court ban on school-sponsored prayer.

She has been active in the fight to enforce the separation of church and state.

Hatch bill clamps down on inmate lawsuits

SALT LAKE CITY — Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has introduced legislation that would penalize prison inmates who file frivolous lawsuits by stripping them of accumulated "good behavior" time.

Under the bill pushed by the Utah Republican on Wednesday in Washington, inmates not only could lose early parole, but might be forced to pay court costs for complaints found to be without merit.

Hatch said if such laws had been in place, then perhaps a Utah State Prison inmate would not have recently filed a suit "demanding that he be issued Reebok or L.A. Gear brand shoes instead of the Converse brand being issued."

Hatch also noted another lawsuit by an inmate who "deliberately flooded his cell and then sued the officers who cleaned up the mess because they got his pinocchio cards wet."

Frivolous lawsuits by inmates have become a major drain on the federal courts, the senator argued.

Business by tabernacle wants liquor permit

ST. GEORGE — When the Legislature wanted to meet in the Logan Tabernacle, the building was deemed a civic center. Now that a restaurant near the St. George Tabernacle wants to serve alcohol, the building is being proclaimed a church.

State law bans a restaurant within 600 feet of a church, school, park, playground or library from dispensing alcoholic beverages. Jerry Baker's restaurant, Mama Eddy's, is 502 feet from the tabernacle grounds.

Baker's application for a state liquor license has been stalled for months on the question of whether the tabernacle is a church or a historical tourist attraction.

The St. George Tabernacle is a church, "maintained primarily to provide ... religious service," said the Presiding Bishopric of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

State lawmakers last year defended their holding a public meeting in the Logan Tabernacle, saying it was used for other secular civic activities.

The building can't be a civic center one time and a place of worship another time, said Carol Gnade, director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Utah.

Abraham Lincoln, was a follow-up to the 1993 White House agreement that brought Rabin and Arafat together for a historic handshake of peace.

"Please, take a good, hard look," Rabin told the hushed audience. "The sight you see before you at this moment was impossible, was unthinkable just three years ago."

But Rabin also warned that peace could crumble unless both sides unite against terrorists who are trying to prevent peace.

"Don't let it happen," he implored. "If all the partners to the peacemaking do not unite against the evil angels of death by terrorism, all that will remain of this ceremony are color snapshots, empty mementos," he added.

Arafat said the accord "demonstrates the irreversibility of the peace process." He called it the "peace of the brave."

The continued settlement of Hebron by 450 militant Jewish settlers there and in other parts of the West Bank has exacerbated tensions, Rabin said. Holding Palestinians as prisoners has also worsened problems, he added.

Rabin suggested that Israel's commitment to the 1993 accord had been uncertain at times.

Both sides have yet to tackle issues such as Israeli settlements, the drawing of borders and the rights of Palestinian refugees in the so-called permanent status negotiations, Arafat said. The biggest issue, he noted, will be the highly charged debate over the future of Jerusalem, the spiritual center of Muslims, Christians and Jews.

"The sanctity of Jerusalem for us all dictates that we make it the joint cornerstone and the capital of peace between the Palestinian and the Israeli peoples, inasmuch as it is a beacon for believers all over the world," Arafat said.

The opening of the ceremony was delayed while Arafat and Rabin personally resolved a last-minute snag over the timing of the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Hebron region, a U.S. official reported.

The two leaders made "pen and ink changes" which resolved the issue, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Once the issue was resolved, the prime minister and the Palestinian leader went to the Cabinet Room near the Oval Office and initialed copies of 26 maps showing in detail the arrangements spelled out in the new agreement.

Provo candidates hold mock council

By ERIC DON HAWKINS
Universe Staff Writer

In a mock city council meeting, candidates in the Provo City Council race were given an opportunity to express their views on issues.

During the Wednesday night meeting, staged in the county commission chambers, each of the eight candidates scheduled to appear on the primary ballot was given two minutes to outline their position on four issues presented. After each had spoken, the topic was opened for discussion among all of the candidates, and then a vote was taken. The audience was also allowed to vote.

Candidates participating included Toni Billings, Mark Hathaway, Barbara J. Kinghorn, Chris D. Nelson, David L. Rail, Ernest Saucier, Mark N. Scofield and John Updike. Jim Daley, Shari Holweg, Stan Lockhart, and Dennis Poulsen were also present, but did not participate because they are not on the primary ballot.

The four issues presented for discussion were: east-west thoroughfares in Provo, air pollution, economic development and housing.

The key element in most of these issues was whether the candidates would approve using eminent domain and/or increasing taxes in order to solve the problems associated with growth.

The proposal to raise taxes in order to widen streets running east-west or create an east-west thoroughfare was voted down seven to one.

The candidates were asked to consider creating one-way streets, limiting left turns, and regulating the use of wood burning stoves in order to decrease pollution. Only the proposal to limit left turns received a majority vote, while the other two proposals were strongly voted down.

Retail development in downtown Provo has been slow because of insufficient parking, and consumer travel time required. It was proposed that re-development agencies be employed to assist in the upgrading of downtown Provo. Once again, eminent domain was not a popular option, but not all of the candidates supported the use of RDAs.

Lastly, the candidates discussed the issue of housing. It was proposed that 200 housing units be built to offset the pressure placed on lower-income families with children. The council voted six to two against the proposal.

Another mock council meeting is scheduled for Nov. 1, at 6:30 p.m. in the Provo City Council Chambers, 351 W. Center Street. All 12 candidates are scheduled to participate.

teach an Honors Book of Mormon class there. More than 50 offices will facilitate research publication development for editors, writers, and researchers.

AMS is a nonprofit organization funded by donations. It has a nucleus of employees and volunteers, several of whom are BYU professors. The heart of the building is said.

AMS was organized 16 years ago in California by John Welch, a BYU law professor, to collect and distribute religious materials not readily available to members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. When Welch was hired by BYU, he joined the foundation with him to continue scholarly study of the Book of Mormon and other scriptures, Hall said.

AMS said the new facility is needed to accomplish the foundation's purposes. Currently, materials are scattered throughout the building. The new building would house all of these people together in a common synergism and provide a place for displays, Hall said.

BYU administration and faculty response has been positive, Hall said. During the year's time, negotiations with the university, a protocol statement was signed, and a foundation to ensure communication with the university.

AMS is the dream of a lot of people, Hall said. "The LDS community has a number of very talented scholars that are eminent in their fields. They have long dreamed for a place where the LDS scholarship could be housed. This is the culmination of a lot of that work over many years."

AMS maintains many projects and makes materials available to teachers and students of the scriptures.

The foundation studies the Dead Sea Scrolls with a worldwide community of Jewish and Christian Biblical scholars. One of the projects, a CD-ROM of Dead Sea Scroll pictures, transcriptions, and translations, will be formally launched next year at a worldwide scholarly conference hosted by AMS in Provo.

AMS is also working with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on the Prophet Joseph Smith's translation of the Bible.

AMS President Noel Edwards announced the plans for the facility at the group's annual meeting at the Provo Park Hotel last week. Elder L. Tom Blum of the Quorum of the Twelve spoke to approximately 100 guests.

Edwards said to you tonight, put your visors over your head, turn out the lamp out, get out those books, get all you need to bring the great light and life of the gospel to the peoples of the world. We are making a marvelous contribution of what we need to know the gospel scholarship," Elder Edwards said.

The property for the new facility was privately owned before the AMS purchase. It includes 10 homes located near 800 South and 500 East.

Military expert gives media a C, traces history of rocky relations

By SCOTT TITTRINGTON
Universe Staff Writer

Grading the media's coverage of the military with a 'C' at best, a national military educator set the tone of Thursday's "Reporting the Military" round table discussion.

"There are very few reporters nowadays with any military background," said Bernard E. Trainor, director of the national security program at Harvard University's school of government. "They tend to be critical of the military unless the military can prove itself otherwise."

As a part of the International Media Studies Program, Trainor joined two other military officials to discuss the job the media have done in covering the U.S. military.

Trainor cited problems of press coverage in the Persian Gulf War and expressed hope that such practices would not become the norm in future coverage of military conflicts.

"During the Gulf War, those reporters covering the Pentagon beat had to stay home, and the people on the scene were out of place," Trainor said. "The people who were there didn't know the difference between a hand grenade and lemonade."

Robert Sims, former assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, echoed Trainor's sentiments, but pointed out that there were some in the media community who stood out as doing a better job.

"I think the problem is that the military knows the media better than the media know the military," Sims said. "But I have to say there are some very good reporters, and the best ones are those covering the Pentagon for their respective television networks."

While a majority of the discussion focused on what the media were doing wrong, Sims also turned the table and looked at the problem from an alternate point of view, placing partial blame on the military.

"It's not all the media's problem; this is something that goes all the way back to the Civil War," Sims said. "I think the military is now doing a better job, but the problem ... is not one-sided."

The military still holds a grudge over the treatment it received in the past from the media, said Amos Jordan, international co-chairman of the Council for Security Cooperation in Asia Pacific.

"A lot of people in the military are still suffering from the 'Vietnam Syndrome,'" Jordan said. "The Army felt then it was getting bad press, and now all of the services see themselves as being mistreated."

Jordan said there are on-going study groups at the service colleges — West Point, Annapolis and Air Force Academy — to discuss relations with the media. He said he personally feels all of these services should follow the lead of the Marine Corps when it comes to handling the media.

"They (the Marines) use people who know what they are talking about, and therefore their relations (with the media) are much more smooth," Jordan said.

No matter what type of relationship evolves between the two, no one will know its success until it comes under fire, Sims said.

"I'm happy because it gives me hope for a new future," said Novis, an Israeli who just completed her compulsory two-year military service.

"I hope I can trust the Palestinians, but that's something I'll only know tomorrow," she said.

Ibrahim Abdeen, a 38-year-old Hebron mosque preacher, said he backed the agreement but had reservations because it permitted 450 Jewish settlers and some Israeli soldiers to remain in Hebron, a city of 120,000 Palestinians.

"I have supported Yasser Arafat from the beginning of the process, but I am against the part about Hebron," Abdeen said, watching the televised signing at a neighbor's home opposite the Jewish settlement of Beit Hadassah.

"This is not peace, because the settlers are in front of my house," said 70-year-old Inshirah Khatib.

National Geographic vice president says geography influences every discipline

By SCOTT TITTRINGTON
Universe Staff Writer

Focusing on the National Geographic's unique brand of journalism, Robert B. Sims shared his expertise on "Reporting the World" at Thursday's Communications Executive Symposium in the de Jong Concert Hall.

Sims, who has served as senior vice president of the National Geographic Society since 1989, related to the audience what the society stands for and how it goes about fulfilling its duties.

"We think that geography is important to every academic discipline, including journalism and communications," Sims said. "We are concerned about the world, and our mission is to increase and diffuse geographic knowledge to everyone."

Sims detailed how students in the United States have historically lacked the geographic knowledge and skills that other students have. In one example, Sims told of a high school graduating class in Dallas, Texas, in which half of the students could not name the country which borders the United States to the south.

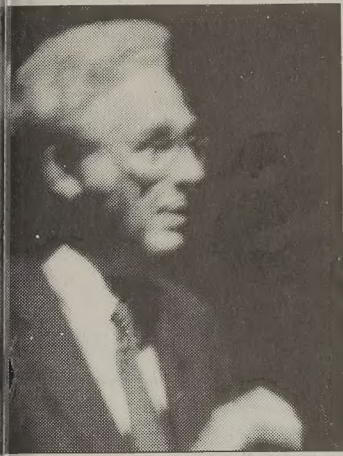

"The society now sponsors a Geography Bee in the United States for students between the fourth and eighth grade," Sims said. "It amazes me the knowledge these kids have begun to acquire; we're having to make the questions more difficult every year."

Sims' presentation included two series of video clips. The first, "A Day in the Life of a National Geographic Photographer," gave the audience a sense of what it takes to work as a photographer for the magazine. The second video, "Connections," was a montage of the different geographic issues.

Jason Alvey, a junior from Niceville, Fla., majoring in advertising, said the film clips made quite an impression when coupled with Sims' remarks.

"I think the video presentations definitely raised the credibility of what Mr. Sims was saying," Alvey said.

Cycling team sponsors 20K bike rally, meal

By RHONDA SLUDER
Universe Staff Writer

World-class cyclists from Team EDS will invite all BYU students and faculty along with their families, to participate in a 20K bike rally Saturday morning at Helaman Field.

Sponsored in cooperation with the LDS Church and the Marriott School of Management, the four-lap 5K route will start on campus and take off at 8 a.m. Registration is recommended and T-shirts will be given to the first 100 people to register.

Following the rally, EDS is sponsoring a breakfast from 9 to 11 a.m. for participants and their families.

Throughout the morning, EDS will be giving away door prizes, including a new bicycle.

EDS is the largest producer of information technology in the world, according to Valerie Murphy of EDS/BYU Campus Relations. Additionally, the company sponsors the EDS, a nationally competitive cycling team. EDS recruits both management and engineering students from BYU.

"They want to increase their presence here on campus," said Cheryl Beth, Marriott School of Management lecture series coordinator, "so they decided to sponsor a bike rally around BYU campus."

In addition to a bike rally and breakfast, two cyclists from Team EDS will ride Thursday to the College of Engineering and the Marriott School of Management students.

Cancer awareness club to host education booth

By REBECCA TODD
 Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Cancer Awareness Group met Tuesday to plan activities for the year to educate the BYU population. They decided to run a cancer education booth October 5 in the ELWC Steppdown Lounge.

"The purpose of the booth is to provide American Cancer Society information for students," said Lance Manning, club president.

Manning was diagnosed with Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma, a type of cancer, when he was 18. He came to BYU after finishing chemotherapy.

Manning said he organized the club to give students with a similar background a way to strengthen each other through support.

Cancer is the second leading cause of death for females between 15 and 34, according to the American Cancer Society 1995 statistics.

Many people see cancer as a frightening thing because they are uneducated, said Karl Kirby, a junior in microbiology from Salem, Ore.

Kirby said many of the club members have had a family member or friend that has dealt with cancer.

"Usually you feel helpless like you can't really do something about it," Kirby said. The club is a way to do something.

Helton said often students come to school and feel helpless because they can not help an ill family member at home. She said students don't feel as helpless if they can help other people battling cancer.

"We serve a lot of groups that don't always get recognized," said Heather Helton, a cancer survivor.

The club planned trips to visit cancer patients in the hospital and speakers on cancer education.

LDS pop artists to give concert

By TIFFANY TERRY
 Universe Staff Writer

Bryce Newbert, Julie de Azevedo, and Envoy will be featured in the Celebrities Concert on Saturday night.

The concert, promoted Forsey Porter Productions, will take place at Cottonwood High School on September 29 at 7:30 p.m.

This performance will offer more than the sing-alongs and firesides where these performers have traditionally performed, said promoter Steve Porter, of Forsey Porter Productions.

The concert marks the first of its kind, he said. The promoters hope to start an annual tradition holding a fun-filled and uplifting concert of contemporary LDS performers the weekend of General Conference, Porter said.

Tickets may be purchased at Smith's Tix or at the door on the night of the performance. Groups of six or more will be given a $2 discount per person.

The hottest thing since Elvis

Friday, October 6 - 7:30 PM - Women's Council Center
 310 West 500 North Provo

John began a serious involvement in song writing around 1978 while working graveyard at an all night gas station in Orem, Utah where he says he spent a lot of time "singing to gas pumps and sea gulls at 3:00 in the morning." It was there that he wrote What If I Loved You?, which later became a #1 hit song on contemporary stations throughout Utah.

In addition to his own concerts, John has had the privilege of doing warm-up performances for the Pointer Sisters, Kenny Loggins, the Jets, and even warmed up for a Connors/Borg tennis match by singing the National Anthem. John's memory of the Kenny Loggins concert, in particular is a colorful one. On the way out to the stage, John stepped on his own guitar and put it out of tune but was so nervous he couldn't get it back in. In desperation, John finally went to the electric piano, which someone had tampered with and which was distorting horribly. Kenny Loggins watched the whole thing. "All the commotion must have made Kenny nervous," John says. "He tripped on his way up to the stage, fell off and broke his ribs."

His experience with inspirational music started with his rendition of You're Not Alone on Michael McLean's You're Not Alone album and on the Bounce Back tape. Since that time, John's voice has been featured on the Together Forever video, two Especially For Youth albums and the Old and New Testament Media videos.

BYU bands compete band battle

By JASON T. GOUGH
 Universe Staff Writer

A battle of the Bands will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the West Court Wilkinson Center.

This year's lineup will include 20 bands who will each play 15-minute sets at tonight's show. To accommodate the number of bands, separate stages will be used to allow the show moving, allowing bands to set up while others play.

After the smoke has cleared after tonight's show, 12 bands will rise vicariously to go on to the preliminaries, which will start next week and end on Sept. 9.

After the bands have had it out in the preliminaries, six bands will be chosen to play in the semi-finals, which will last from Oct. 10 to Oct. 12. Only four bands will be selected to play in the finals on Oct. 13. The winning band will be announced that night.

In order to play in Battle of the Bands, at least one member of the band must be a BYU student.

Rocky Skye, a country band, took first place at last year's show, followed by Primary Wine in a close second.

Bands playing at tonight's show, in order of performance, are Imhotep, Outbadours, Thee Martinis, Uncle Wiley's Radiator Band, Ace is Dead, Sketch, Claudia Doesn't Like Pennyroyal Crush, Sleepy, Mud Pige, Honey Tree, Randall's Siblings, Sibling Revelry, Little Boy, Over The Fence, Fish and The Fishes, Zero, Sofa, Oz-Static, Richter, and Forty Days.

Cougars ready to rumble with the Rams

By STEPHEN MOHLMAN
Universe Sports Writer

BYU football fans face a dilemma this weekend as the Cougars take on the Colorado State University Rams.

Because it is an away game, the Cougars couldn't schedule the game around the LDS General Conference. BYU takes on CSU in Fort Collins, Colo., Saturday at noon, competing with the second conference session.

According to coach Norm Chow, when the Cougars are scheduled to play at home on conference weekend, they usually play on Friday night. But when they play on the road, they are at the mercy of the opposing team.

The game will be aired live on ESPN2 and the Prime Sports Network. Fans who don't want to miss conference can catch the game via tape delay on KSL (Channel 5) at 9 p.m., or on KSL radio (1160 AM) at 4 p.m.

This is an important game for the Cougars, who are trying to stay in contention for the Western Athletic Conference title. BYU (1-2 overall, 1-1 WAC) has had success at Hughes Stadium against CSU (2-1 overall, 1-0 WAC). BYU hasn't lost at Colorado State since 1975.

In last year's meeting, however, CSU beat BYU in Provo 28-21. The Rams intercepted four BYU passes, and played a solid game on both sides of the ball. Last year's WAC champion, CSU, returns many starters from last year.

"They are very good on both offense and defense. They are the defending champions," coach LaVell Edwards said.

Colorado State beat the Air Force Academy two weeks ago 27-20 with a balanced offensive attack. Senior fullback E.J. Watson rushed for 122 yards

IN A NUTSHELL

TIME: Saturday, noon
PLACE: Hughes Stadium, Fort Collins, Colo.

TV: ESPN2, nationally televised; KSL, tape delay at 9 p.m.

RECORDS: BYU 1-2, 1-1; CSU 2-1, 1-0

LAST MEETING: CSU won 28-21, intercepting four John Walsh passes

SERIES RECORD: BYU leads 28-23-3
IT'S BEEN A WHILE: The last time BYU lost in Fort Collins was in 1975, before starting DB Tim McTyer was born

NO INTIMIDATION: Coach LaVell Edwards has a 9-4 record versus defending WAC champs QUOTEBOOK: "There's nothing worse than going out the first time on the field and getting scored on. It's demoralizing. We'd rather be the demoralizers." — Matt Redden, BYU defensive end against AFA, and is fifth in the WAC in rushing yards.

Another key to their victory last week was junior wide receiver Paul Turner, who caught six passes for 107 yards and two touchdowns. Junior quarterback Daren Wilkinson, who transferred to CSU from Ricks College, had a good offensive game against Air Force after struggling his first two weeks.

CSU's defense is anchored by senior free safety Greg Myers, a four-year starter and All-American last year. Myers had two interceptions against BYU last year, one for a touchdown. Last week he intercepted a pass to stop AFA's final drive.

The BYU football team is healthy and looks to extend its current NCAA record to 253 consecutive games without being shut out. BYU has scored in every game since 1975.

BYU currently ranks fifth in the NCAA in passing, averaging 352 yards per game, but CSU's pass defense is also excellent. They have allowed only 160 yards per game passing. Chow sees no major change in offensive strategy against CSU.

"We would like to get the running game going," Chow said.

BYU continues to struggle running the ball, having gained only 18 net yards rushing through three games. Junior running back Mark Atuaia will be at full strength for the Cougars on Saturday, and Chow said his presence will definitely help the running game.

CSU has not played well against the run this year. They have allowed nearly 220 yards rushing per game.

BYU feels that this is a must-win game to accomplish its goals of winning the WAC title.

"We're in big trouble if we don't win," quarterback Steve Sarkisian said. "This is a very, very big game for us."

TO DYE FOR: James Dye returns a San Diego State punt 84 yards for a touchdown. He now ranks second in the nation in punt returns.

Unhappy as an Aggie, Dye is delighted to be a Cougar

By STEPHEN MOHLMAN
Universe Sports Writer

Cornerback James Dye had never considered playing football at BYU until a short while ago, yet he had already been a true-blue Cougar.

From his Pop Warner football days in Oakland, through his years at Crenshaw High School in Los Angeles, Dye's football teams were always named the Cougars. And blue has always been the predominant color in his uniforms.

Dye was born and raised in Oakland, but moved to Los Angeles his sophomore year in high school. His youth and surroundings have definitely shaped the person he has become.

Family has always been important to Dye, and he said his sister, who is 14 years his elder, practically raised him.

Dye, 21, is now a successful college student and football player, but he has gone through many challenges to get where he is today. He was recruited out of high school by both Utah State and San Jose State, and eventually decided on USU.

Dye had difficulties meeting the enrollment requirements, because he always struggled academically. But through hard work and determination, he made it to Utah State.

In 1993 at Utah State, Dye's talents became evident as he was the nation's fifth-leading punt returner. Dye, however, was unhappy with the situation in "Planet Logan." He was moved

What does the CSU football game really mean? BYU controls its own destiny right now. By winning its remaining conference games, BYU

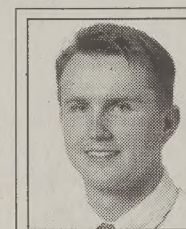

By losing a single WAC game, the likelihood of either of these occurrences becomes almost nil.

That's why the Cougars can't lose. This game means too much.

Colorado State, on the other hand, can afford to lose. After handing Air Force its first WAC loss, the Rams also control their own destiny.

They can win out their schedule and claim the WAC title outright — or they can lose to BYU and share the crown.

SHOW OF HANDS, PLEASE: Heather Whittaker (18) and Angie Walker Tanner (5) form a net to block a Utah State hitter. Tanner was forced out of the Utah match by tendinitis last week, but will play when the volleyball team meets Wyoming and Colorado State this weekend.

With two WAC matches, spikers hope to rebound from loss to Utah

By CHRIS JONES
Universe Sports Writer

BYU women's volleyball team found itself in this weekend of WAC play in an unexpected position: the bottom of the conference standings. The 8-3, 0-1 Cougars were swept in two games in last week's match against Utah and dropped from 16th to 18th in the USA Today/AVCA poll. The team opens up a two-game weekend against Utah on Saturday at 7:30, taking on a tough opponent. The Cougars, 12-2 overall with a 6-1 conference record, is currently on a three-match winning streak with big wins over UTEP and New Mexico last weekend. The Cougars play Wyoming on Saturday at 8 p.m. Wyoming has a 10-10 record overall and in-conference (5-1-1). The Cougars have played some tough matches this year with four of their wins coming against nationally ranked teams. The Cougars have never lost a conference match to either team and has a 35-6-1 record against Colorado State and a 20-1 record against Wyoming, but Elaine Michaelis isn't letting the Cougars get ahead against either of them. "These are important WAC contests," Michaelis said. "I said before the season started that there are a lot of teams that can win on any night." In last week's loss to Utah, outside hitter Angie Tanner went out of the first game with a flare-up of chronic tendinitis in her knee. She has been practicing this week and is slated to play this weekend. The Cougars head into this weekend's matchups with Amy Steele leading the team with 3.56 kills and 1.41 blocks per game and Heather Whittaker leading the team in hitting percentage with .306. "We need to keep focused and improve on our concentration," Michaelis said in a press release. "We have good talent, we just have to find a way to use it more effectively." Junior setter Laci Olmstead said the team has made some big adjustments for this weekend's matches in light of last week's loss to Utah. "Obviously, last week was a really bad loss. It was our first conference match and it was against Utah," Olmstead said. "It has caused us to take a really strong look at our play and make some changes." "Our biggest problem was our passing and serving last week, so we've focused on that this past week," Olmstead said.

Deber athletic program still alive

Associated Press

MOEN — Football ticket sales and donations are down this year, but the State's sports programs continue to make strides toward fiscal balance, athletic director Dutch Belnap said Wednesday. Belnap's athletic program is in trouble, Belnap noted the department had been in the red ink in its budget even though the administration trimmed its budget by $120,000. The cut is part of a plan to trim $100,000 in annual discretionary spending by next year. Belnap said the athletic program has been replacing those funds with growth in revenues from athletic events, ticketing income and other activities at the Dee Events Center. Belnap has a goal of self-sufficiency, and has been closely monitoring its athletic program, especially football. With the threat of losing football next year, athletic officials mounted an aggressive campaign to boost support and revenues. Belnap insists the effort has been a success. Football revenues more than tripled last year, he said, and thus that program no longer is at risk, he said.

Cross country teams running in Missoula

Universe Services

WAC Athlete of the Week Janeth Caizalitin and Orem freshman Dula Parkeson are BYU's headliners as the Cougar cross country teams head to a meet this Saturday at Missoula, Mont.

Caizalitin placed seventh individually last week in leading her team to a fourth-place finish at the Washington Invitational. This week she leads the same travel squad at the Mountain West Invitational. Parkeson, a Utah prep phenom, was absent from the team which won last week's meet and is the only change on the men's roster.

The Cougar women's team is ranked 14th in the latest poll, while the men remain 17th. The Montana meet features some stiff competition in two-time defending meet champion in third-ranked Michigan, 15th-ranked Arizona for the women and eighth-ranked Michigan, 13th-ranked Oregon and defending champion Montana State for the men. Other teams in the field include Washington State, Gonzaga, Montana State-Billings, Western Washington and all Big Sky Conference teams except Northern Arizona.

In addition to these teams, there will also be some strong individuals competing, especially in the men's 8K race which begins at 10:15 a.m. Former Cougar and two-time Olympian Ed Eyestone, Olympian Pat Porter, and respected racers Jonathan Hume and Brad Barquist, who won last week's Washington race, are running unattached in this meet which kicks off the Reebok Grand Prix series.

"We are sore and I would rather we didn't have a meet this week," says BYU men's coach Sherald James, whose squad set a course record with 25 points last weekend. "We went into last week's meet confident, but this week will be tough, really tough."

The Cougar women will be running their 6K race at 11:15 a.m. on the same University of Montana Golf Course. The course will be a European format with logs and hills.

"We will turn it up a notch this week, but not a lot," says BYU women's coach Patrick Shane. "We will be more aggressive, but are still low key. It is a great chance to run against the potential national champion in Michigan on a tough course which is familiar to some of our runners."

Following the Montana meet, the Cougars will have a week off until they host the BYU/Reebok Grand Prix on Oct. 14.

round a lot there, and believes he hasn't treated with respect by the Utah State football program.

"I wasn't appreciated, so I decided to toil and struggle where they wanted me," Dye said.

BYU was among those universities who wanted him.

DeWayne Walker, BYU's defensive backs coach last year, knew Dye from the previous year at USU. He knew Dye was a great football player. Dye could have transferred to another school, but he chose BYU for a number of reasons.

"There's a really good atmosphere at BYU," Dye said.

Dye also liked BYU's great football tradition, and the excellent coaching staff. One of the drawbacks of playing for BYU is one that keeps many star athletes away — the infamous Honor Code.

Football players are expected to live by the same standards as any other student, and Dye knew that he was no exception to the rule.

"Here at BYU, you're expected to uphold the rules," Dye said. "And that's definitely a sacrifice."

Dye, however, knows about sacrifice and hard work.

According to NCAA rules, when players transfer from one 4-year institution to another, they must sit out a year. Dye said he struggled with not being able to competitively play the sport he had played religiously since the age of seven.

Sitting out a year hurt him physically, as well.

"I'm still getting in shape," Dye said.

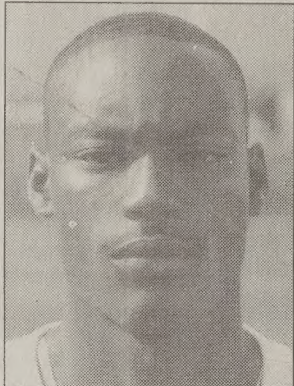

You wouldn't know it by looking at him that he's not in perfect shape. Dye is 5-foot-9 and weighs a svelte 150 pounds. Not your typical football frame, but, according to cornerback coach Brian Mitchell, Dye's quickness and natural ability make

James Dye: a brief history

Born: Dec. 8, 1973 in Oakland, Calif.

High School: At Crenshaw High School in Los Angeles, he helped the Cougars to the league title and City Championship. He was his team's premier runner, accounting for 16 rushing TDs and two more TD receptions, while accumulating 1,300 yards rushing. He was selected all-city, all-league and honorable mention all-state. He was on the principal's honor roll.

College before BYU: At Utah State, Dye played defensive back in 1992 and running back in 1993. He was second-team All-Big West as a kickoff return specialist, led the league in punt returns and finished eighth nationally with a 12.2-yard average. He was second on the team in rushing in 1993 (447 yards, 3 TDs). He attended Utah Valley State College in 1994, which doesn't have football.

him a great football player despite his lack of size.

"He's a very mature 21-year-old," Mitchell said.

Mitchell is impressed with what Dye has done to get where he is now. He recently completed a semester's worth of classes in six weeks to be able to play for BYU this year, Mitchell said.

"I know this sounds cliché, but if James puts his mind to something, he can accomplish just about anything," Mitchell said.

Dye said one of his goals is to become one of the best punt returners in the game. He is already off to a great start. He was the nation's second-leading punt returner as of last week.

To be a great punt returner, Dye said, you need to be relaxed, confident, and prepared.

"You can't be scared to take a hit,"

Dye said, "Because you get hit, and you get hit hard."

Dye is reluctant to accept accolades so early in the season for his success on the field. And if he isn't a great success in football, Dye isn't worried. Football is very important to him, but Dye says that it's not his first priority in life.

"Going to college and playing major college football are dreams that I never thought would come true," Dye said.

Having realized those dreams, Dye has set some loftier goals. He wants to lead BYU to a national championship, and he also wants to attend graduate school.

If his life up to now is any indication, Dye will achieve those goals as well.

As coach Mitchell said, James Dye can accomplish anything he sets his mind to, on or off the football field.

SHARE from page 8

faithfully as I did, they might understand the principle of sharing, and all the warm fuzzies that come with it. But I don't think they went to primary.

Darn it. Time for a new strategy.

The Cougars will have to battle to win this one. They plan to do it, too.

Sure, the Rams are the defending WAC champs.

Sure, the Rams slammed the brakes on an Air Force team that picked BYU apart like a ... uhhhh ... well, like a wishbone (pardon the awful pun — if you don't get it, that shows just how awful it really is).

Sure, the Rams beat BYU in Provo last year. And sure, this year's game is in Fort Collins.

But the talk around the Cougar camp is reassuring. These guys mean business. They are out for blood.

Linebacker Stan "Don't Call Me Mr. Nice Guy" Raass spoke about his contempt for quarterbacks at "Chalk Talk" Wednesday.

"I don't like quarterbacks, period. When I get a chance to hit them, I give 'em a shot. ... We want to do something to get everybody fired up, so if it takes hitting the quarterback or hitting the running back, we're going to do whatever it takes."

Hey, sounds good to me.

Here is defensive end Matt Redden's take on the issue of brutality:

"We've got to get off on the right foot — give them some big hits; get them thinking about the last hit; make sure both the running back and the quarterback know that we're there to hit them. We want to clobber them."

That's what I like to hear.

To witness this violence, tune in to ESPN2 Saturday at noon (or KSL-TV at 9 p.m. — it'll be a great way to top off a day of General Conference).

But beware, it may be unsuitable for small children — unless CSU decides to share. But if CSU won't share willingly, the Cougars will just have to go out and take what's rightfully theirs.

I think there's a moral to this story somewhere.

Pitcher attacked by angry fan after surrendering home run

Associated Press

CHICAGO — A 27-year-old bond trader ran onto the field and attacked Randy Myers of the Chicago Cubs, moments after the reliever gave up a home run Thursday that could have cost his team a chance at the NL wildcard spot.

The incident happened after pinch-hitter James Mouton hit a two-run homer that put the Houston Astros ahead 9-7 in the eighth inning. Then, a man jumped from the Wrigley Field stands, crossed the first-base line and ran toward the 6-foot-1, 230-pound Myers.

Myers saw the fan coming, dropped his glove and knocked him down with his forearm. The two were rolling on the ground near the pitcher's mound, and Myers had the man pinned when several Chicago players broke up the fight.

his name, quoted his brother as saying.

Murray's wife said her husband is a lifelong Cubs fan and attends about 15 games a season. She said he works at the Chicago Board of Trade as a broker in bond options. The couple was married in May and is expecting a child.

"He's never done anything like this before," she said. "Could he really have been this drunk?"

Myers, a member of the Nasty Boys in the Cincinnati bullpen in 1990 and known as a tough guy who collects military memorabilia, remained in the game. Shortly after the incident, the Cubs came back to tie the game and send it into extra innings, and won 12-11 in the 11th.

The attack was the latest incident in a season marked by contentious relations between fans and players.

Earlier this year, pitcher Jack McDowell provoked the booing crowd at Yankee Stadium by twirling his middle finger several times. Chili Davis of the California Angels went over to the stands and poked a fan who he believed was heckling him — it turned out Davis had the wrong man.

The world of sports has often been a setting for confrontations between those on the field and those in the stands.

- The most prominent example of late was the stabbing of tennis star Monica Seles in Germany in 1993. She was ranked No. 1 in the world when a 39-year-old man plunged a knife into back, putting her out of action for more than two years.
- In baseball, Jimmy Piersall kicked a fan in the behind who had run onto the field to antagonize him at Yankee Stadium in 1961. In 1976, Rick Monday of the Chicago Cubs seized an American flag from two fans who were going to try to burn it at Dodger Stadium. In the 1940s, a fan at Ebbets Field beat up umpire George Magerkurth after a game.
- Mike Curtis, a linebacker for the Baltimore Colts, once leveled a fan who tried to scoop a football during the NFL game at Memorial Stadium. In 1992, Rob Ray of the Buffalo Sabres pummeled a hockey fan who jumped onto the ice and was taunting players on the team's bench.
- Vernon Maxwell of the Houston Rockets went after a fan in the stands in February in Portland. Maxwell punched the man, who he claimed was heckling him.

"For a second, I thought it might have been him. But then they said on TV, 'Some stupid fan ran onto the field' and my husband isn't stupid."

— wife of the man who attacked pitcher Randy Myers

"His hands started reaching for what I thought was a weapon," said Myers, skilled in martial arts. "I made sure his hands didn't go into his waistband and pull out a knife or a gun."

The fan, John Murray of suburban Riverside, Ill., was removed by Wrigley Field security officers and taken to Town Hall police lockup, about five blocks from the ballpark.

Police said Murray, 6-1 and 185 pounds, was not armed. Police did not comment on whether he had been drinking.

"I can't believe it's him!" said Murray's wife, Lucy, 23, when contacted at home by The Associated Press.

"He called today from work and said he wanted to go to the game," she said. "I was flipping through the TV channels just now and I saw it. For a second, I thought it might have been him. But then they said on TV, 'Some stupid fan ran onto the field' and my husband isn't stupid."

According to police Lt. Frank Kehoe, Murray was charged with assault and disorderly conduct. Murray was released on $75 bond, and a court date was set for Oct. 24.

Murray, wearing a denim shirt, was released through a side door and did not comment. He did not appear to be hurt in the scuffle.

A man identified by police as Murray's brother said he was at the game when Myers was brought in to relieve.

"If he throws another home run, I'm going to run out there and give him what for," the man, who did not give

1000 Goshen Canyon blaze may be part of growing arson problem, detective says

By DIXIE HARRIS
Universe Staff Writer

men were arrested and Sept. 16 with setting four Goshen Canyon, about 35 southwest of Provo. Atkin, 20, and his cousin Atkin, 19, are accused of setting fires with a cigarette lighter burned across 10 acres of ad, according to public information officer Ron Fernstedt of the Utah County Sheriff Department. The two were arrested at the scene and police say there may have been alcohol involved. Damage to the property was assessed at $4,000. The two were both charged with a third degree felony. They could face up to five years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine. The number of intentional fires is on the rise, said Dick Buehler, a fire detective with the Division of Sovereign Lands and Forestry. He said there are approximately 700 forest fires each year, of which about 40 percent are caused by humans, both accidentally and on purpose. It is usually easy to find the origin of the fire, but unless gas was used, finding the actual device is more difficult, Buehler said.

Insomnia problems require unique cures

By MINDY MCCOOL
Universe Staff Writer

ities do exist to combat ia, said Dr. Lon Olsen of the lald Health Center. e said students should first ze that there are three types tions, Olsen said. Although cases of chronic insomnia require medical attention, there are several things a person can do to deal with transient and brief insomnia — such as 20 minutes of aerobic exercise, avoiding stimulants and large meals before bed, and memorizing poetry.

Any relaxation technique can be used to deal with insomnia, Olsen said. Olsen said he has his own formula for dealing with insomnia: when he finds he can't sleep he tells himself, "I don't care if I'm awake. I'll go to sleep eventually." Erica Burda, 21, a senior from San Jose, Calif., majoring in psychology, said when she can't sleep, she writes in her journal until she doesn't have anything else to think about. Georgia Ogles, 23, an undecided major from Brigham City, also has a unique strategy. "If I have a lot on my mind, I don't even attempt to go to bed," Ogles said.

Local pageant offers chance to show talents

By J. AUDREY THATCHER
Universe Staff Writer

Applications are now available for the Miss Utah Valley Scholarship Pageant.

Any unmarried woman attending BYU is eligible even if she is not from Utah. Women between the ages of 17 and 24 who have participated in their local pageants are also eligible.

The winner and two runners-up will receive scholarship awards, said Carin Green, public relations director and news correspondent for Payson City Green Secretarial Services. There will be additional non-finalist awards, she said.

"The Miss Utah Valley Scholarship Pageant is a preliminary to the Miss Utah Pageant, which takes its winner to the Miss America Pageant," Green said.

So far, $1,500 in donations has been raised for the three scholarships, Green said. At least $750 of that will go to the winner of the Miss Utah Valley Pageant, she said.

Additional funds are being raised, Green said, so the actual scholarships may be more. Ten finalists will be chosen from the contestants, she added.

Pageant activities include a fashion show with clothes provided to the contestants by local stores, Green said. There might also be a little sister program, in which the contestants would have a "little sister" to walk on stage with them, she said.

Contestants will be judged in four areas: judges' interview, evening wear, physical fitness in swimsuit and talent presentation.

For the privacy of the contestants, the swimsuit segment will not be open to the public. The talent presentation is limited to two minutes and 50 seconds.

The pageant will be Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Payson High School auditorium. For further information contact Chad Hulet, director of the pageant and owner/manager of the Petal Pantry, a sponsor of the pageant. Hulet's phone number is 465-2585.

Applications are due Tuesday at the Petal Pantry in Payson. They can be obtained from Hulet in person, or applicants can send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to 54 N. Main, Payson, Utah, 84651. Envelopes must be postmarked no later than Tuesday.

The first meeting for the contestants will be at 510 W. 300 North, Payson, Oct. 7 at 8:30 p.m. Pictures for the pageant will also be taken at the meeting.

West High students who objected to book will have separate class

By ALEXANDER STOCKS
Universe Staff Writer

Seven students at West High School who objected to a book assigned in their International Baccalaureate class will be taught in a separate class that does not require the book, said Paula Fowler, the IB teacher who assigned the book.

Fowler said the separate class will meet at 6 a.m. and will be privately funded by the community because the school district can't afford to pay for a class of seven students. The separate class will be taught by a different teacher, but will fill the same IB requirement as the original class.

Fowler said media reports of students and parents attempting to have her dismissed were inaccurate.

The controversy started when one student, Rob Steenblick, objected to sections of "overt physical sexuality" in the book "House of Spirits," by Isabell Allende, Fowler said.

Steenblick never meant to cause problems, Fowler said, but only wanted the school to offer another IB class for students who objected to the book. Six other students shared the same views.

"(Steenblick) had done the work and was a superb student," Fowler said.

She said some of the others hadn't read the book, but joined in Steenblick's objections.

The IB program originated in Wales and is recognized internationally as an accelerated learning experience for academically gifted students, Fowler said. Students who complete the program receive an IB degree, which transfers into college credit, she said.

Fowler said students taking her class must have already completed Advanced Placement English, which makes it surprising that they would object to a book which seems reasonably mild and is on the internationally approved list for the IB program.

Even though the school board was aware of the situation, the administration handled it, said Mary Joe Rasmussen, president of the board for the Salt Lake City School District. "While this was going on (about two weeks ago), I received numerous calls and numerous letters and I haven't received anything in the past two weeks," Rasmussen said. She said West High is a school with innovative programs and a diverse student body. "I think anytime you kind of step out and try to blaze a trail, you kind of step on some toes," Rasmussen said.
